Canadian Rally Championship for Production Class Drivers for the Andy Browning Memorial Trophy

From 1977 through 1981 there were no displacement classes in the championship. From 1982 through 1988 production class was divided into two displacement classes: production A for cars with engines of 1600 cc displacement or less and production B for cars with engines with greater than 1600 cc displacement. From 1989 to 1991, production class was divided into two displacement classes: Production, for cars with engines of 2350 cc displacement or less, and Production GT for cars with engines with greater than 2350 cc displacement. From 1992 to 2000, production class was divided into three displacement classes: Production 1750, for cars with engines of 1750 cc displacement or less, Production Sport for cars with engines of 2650 cc displacement or less, and Production GT for cars with engines with greater than 2650 cc displacement. From 2001 through 2008, production class was divided into four displacement classes, P1, less than 1400cc; P2, 1402cc to 1600cc; P3, 1601cc to 2000cc and P4, more than 2000cc. From 2002 through 2007, Group N classes were also added to the production championship. From 2009 through 2012, production class was divided into two displacement classes: Production Sport with an adjusted displacement of 2000cc or less and Production Sport with an adjusted displacement greater than 2000cc. From 2013, Production class has been divided between 2WD and 4WD.

Championnat canadien de rallye des pilotes de classe production -
Pour le Trophée Andy Browning

De 1977 à 1981, ce championnat ne comptait qu'une classe. De 1982 à 1988, on comptait deux classes: la production A pour les voitures dont la cylindrée était de 1600 cc et moins, et la production B pour les voitures dont la cylindrée était de plus de 1600 cc. De 1989 à 1991, la classe production a été divisée en deux classes selon la cylindrée: la classe production, pour les véhicules dont la cylindrée ajustée ne dépassait pas 2350 cc, et la classe production GT pour les véhicules dont la cylindrée ajustée dépassait 2350 cc. De 1992 à 2000, la classe Production a été divisée en trois classes selon la cylindrée: production 1750, pour les véhicules dont la cylindrée ajustée ne dépassait pas 1750 cc, production Sport pour les véhicules dont la cylindrée ajustée dépassait 1750 cc sans dépasser 2650 cc, et la classe production GT pour les véhicules dont la cylindrée ajustée dépassait 2650 cc. De 2001 à 2008, la classe production a été divisée en quatre classes selon la cylindrée ajustée, P1, cylindrée de moins de 1400cc, P2 cylindrée de 1401cc à 1600cc, P3, cylindrée de 1601cc à 2000cc et P4 pour des cylindrées de plus de 2000cc. De 2002 à 2007, des classes production, basées sur les classes Groupe N de la FIA comme en 1 (a) ci-dessus, ont aussi été ajoutées au championnat. De 2009 à 2012, la classe production a été ramenée à deux classes : Sport, pour les cylindrées ajustées de moins de 2000 cc, et GT, pour les autres. Depuis 2013, la classe production a été divisé en classes 2RM et 4RM.

D North American Rally Cup for Production Class

This championship ran from 1990 to 2008 for production Drivers, Co-drivers and Marques. Eligible vehicles were those which met the Production Class rules of either the CARS Rally Regulations or the RA/NASA Rally Rules in Production and Production GT. Prior to 1989, there was only one production class where eligible vehicles were grouped together.

Championnat nord-américain de rallye - Classe Production

De 1990 à 2008, il y avait un championnat Production pour les pilotes, copilotes et les marques. Les véhicules éligibles étaient ceux qui correspondent aux normes de la Classe Production et de la Classe Production GT des règlements de la CARS ou des règlements nationaux de la RA ou de la NASA. Avant 1989, il n'y avait qu'une seule classe qui réunissait tous les véhicules éligibles.
